Welcome to your learning for Week Four. As I am sure you are aware, our Year 11s and 12s have joined us at school today. While this is a great step to returning to some form of normality in the near future, we continue to look forward to the day when we are all back at school together learning. The Premier of Queensland will make a final announcement on the 15th of May as to what will happen from Week Six onwards, but at the moment the signs are looking positive that we will all be back at school on the 25th of May.

Your Term One report cards have now been emailed to your Parents/Caregivers. I encourage you to look at these and consider what you may be able to implement so that you may not only reach your potential this term but I believe in aiming to surpass this.

As we are now into Week Four, your assessment schedule and tasks requiring submission need to be managed well and you need to ensure you are up to date with everything. As I have said before, some of you will be enjoying the online/learning at home and others will be very much looking forward to returning in Week Six and accessing face-to-face teaching. Don't forget to ask your teachers for support or advice if you are unsure about any of your tasks.

Here is some advice from me as we move into the last two weeks of blended learning.

- Continue to do your best. If you are having trouble, have a go and then make sure to contact your teacher to talk this through with you.
- Use technology wisely. Rather than using it for Netflix, Xbox etc., use it to check with your friends and classmates regularly, the coming weeks will be easier for you by continuing to look out for each other.
- Be thankful for your Parents and Caregivers. These are stressful times for them also and they are doing a wonderful job of supporting you to do your best during this period of blended learning.
- Stay on track with your studies and remember to look after yourself. Remember to access the daily challenges that are designed to assist you both physically and mentally.

Continue to access the links on the Learning @ Wilsonton SHS newsletter - these are invaluable and provide you with some connectivity with different aspects around our school, especially seeing your teachers provide a book review or our great Captain's Chat that occurs each week.

Don't forget to keep checking in each morning through your email and checking your weekly tasks that are required to be submitted.

Good luck with your learning this week.
